次の英文は、美香(Mika)が、電子書籍(e-book)と紙の書籍(printed book)について、英語の授業で発表したときのものです。1~3の問いに答えなさい。

Do you read e-books? E-books are books that you can read on digital devices such as a tablet. They have become very popular. So do you think that people will read only e-books in the future?

Look at Graph 1. This shows the sales of e-books and printed books in Japan from 2015 to 2021. You can see that the total sales of both books kept ① between 2015 and 2018, but they started rising from 2019. The sales of printed books kept decreasing, and in 2021 they became the ② in the seven years. On the other hand, the sales of e-books ③ increasing. In 2021, they became more than one quarter of the total sales of both books.

Actually, many kinds of books are becoming e-books today, but I found that picture books are different. One article says that most picture books are still read as printed books because they have special points. For example, children can enjoy touching books and turning their pages. They can also enjoy books of different shapes and sizes.

Then, how about the sales of picture books? Look at Graph 2. This shows the sales of picture books from 2013 to 2021. In 2013, they were 29.4 billion yen. In 2019, they decreased a little from 2017. However, they became more than 35 billion yen in 2021. According to one article, many long-selling picture books keep the sales of picture books good. In addition, many people who experienced different types of jobs became picture book artists. These new artists have been bringing unique ideas into picture books. These books are so attractive that children and even adults have become big fans of them. Because of these reasons, the sales of them got higher.

E-books are popular, but printed books have their own good points, too. So I believe printed books will still be read by many people in the future.

次の英文は、中学生のジョン(John)、陸(Riku)、朝美(Asami)、花(Hana)が、道の駅(roadside station)について調べ、英語の授業で発表するために話し合いをしているときのものです。1～6の問に答えなさい。

John : Let's talk about roadside stations for our presentation. Today we are going to think about two questions: "Why were roadside stations made?" and "Why are roadside stations becoming popular?"

Riku : About the first question, I found a good article. It says that roadside stations were originally made as a place for resting along the road. Drivers used them for restrooms, drinks, and road information. In 1993, 103 places were registered as roadside stations. Then the number has been increasing for 30 years. In 2023, there were 1,209. Now Gifu has 56 roadside stations, and the number is the second largest in Japan! That made me surprised.

John : The second largest in Japan? I'm surprised to know that, too. We should show these facts first in our presentation. Let's move on to the second question.

Asami : Well, I found that some roadside stations are becoming popular because they give cultural and natural experiences to visitors. For example, at one roadside station in Gifu, visitors can experience making soba. I went there to do it with my family, and it was a lot of fun. At other roadside stations, visitors can enjoy picking fruits or even relax in hot springs!

John : I see. Now they are not just for resting. I think some of them have become a "destination" of a trip like an amusement park. Do you know any other reasons?

Asami : Yes. Many visitors look forward to getting special products from the area. For example, they can buy fresh fruits and vegetables. Actually, my grandmother sells vegetables at a roadside station. One day, I found her tomatoes with "POP advertising" there. Her name and smiling face were printed on it. It said, "Great tomato farmer with 35 years of experience!" I think people feel safe to see who made the products. In addition, she loves talking to people buying her tomatoes. She is happy that many people are now fans of her tomatoes. She says, "Because of the roadside station, I feel proud of my job."

John : Asami explained why roadside stations are attractive to visitors. They can enjoy cultural and natural experiences there. This should be the second point in our presentation. She also talked about the local people's feelings. It may be important to think about the value of roadside stations for the local people, too.

Hana : I agree. I visited one roadside station last Saturday and interviewed a staff member, Mr. Honda. He told me that the staff members and local people worked hard together to make the town attractive with the roadside station. They spent a long time and finally created special ice creams and jams with local milk and fruits. They also decided to sell traditional local dishes that they eat in their daily lives. He said, "I was glad that these new products and local dishes quickly got popular. But I was also glad that many people in the town were more connected and found the town's value that we didn't realize. Now we are proud of this town." It means that they discovered their town's attractive and unique points because of the roadside station. I thought this is a good point of roadside stations for the local people.

John : That's an important point. Let's talk about it at the end of our presentation. Well, look at these notes. The main points of our presentation will be these three. Now we should <sup>①</sup>decide the title. I think the best title to show the main idea of our presentation is "Michi-no-Eki:  ② ." This includes all of your points. Do you agree?

< Riku, Asami, and Hana agree with John. >

John : Thank you. I'm sure everyone will enjoy our presentation!
